Found his way back to the Chiba Lotte Marines by making the team in an open tryout. He spent the next three years in the Pacific Coast League and split 2000 between Class-A Lancaster and Triple-A Buffalo. That season was the last professional baseball he played. He batted .249/.297/.386 in 79 games.

At the end of the 2000 season, Munson was released by the Mariners and was picked up by the Mets for the 2001 season.

Munson played for two more seasons in the minors for the Chicago White Sox, batting .212 in 70 games with the AA Birmingham Barons, then hitting .235 in 32 games for the AAA Charlotte Knights. He spent most of 2002 with the Albuquerque Isotopes, a Double-A team in the Florida Marlins system.

In 2003, Munson played with the Birmingham Barons and the Syracuse SkyChiefs. The Blue Jays claimed him off waivers from the Red Sox on December 12, 2002.

Charlton went 2-2 with a 5.51 ERA in 16 appearances with the Tampa Bay Devil Rays in 2006, his final season as a player.

In 24 major league games (24 starts), he went 7-8 with a 5.66 ERA in 134.1 innings, striking out 71 and walking 53. His ERA+ was 90. In 2004, Munson joined the Trenton Thunder staff as a pitching coach. <|diff_marker|> --- filename <|diff_marker|> 1008 +-

It's normal for babies to cry and fuss as they adjust to new routines and try to establish regular sleep patterns. But if your baby cries frequently, refuses to eat, is less interested in playing or exploring or is hard to console, or is not sleeping well, then you may want to check with your child's healthcare provider to make sure there isn't a medical reason for this. Developmental problems such as ADHD, autism, and other neurodevelopmental disorders can affect the child's behavior and cause regression in their toilet training, says Dr. Klass.

In addition, kids can also develop these problems after a traumatic event like abuse or death of a loved one. There is also a school of thought that children are prewired to be obedient and that the same training methods used to train animals can be used to train kids. Even our friend Stella Gibbons suggests that. But honestly, the most important thing in discipline is patience, consistency, and limits. Spanking is considered an older form of discipline, which can do harm to kids who will experience trauma and that's the last thing we want to do. So, if you want your children to have less self-confidence and self-respect, here are some really great ideas.

Foster Ambition in Your Children: Even when they are little, make sure to allow them to see you working. If they're very young, then include them in your home life where possible. Make them feel like they're "part of the team" and that you're on their side.

Praise Effort, Not Achievement: Rather than saying, "You're so smart!" say, "You worked really hard and did a great job!" or "You tried so hard!".

Focus on Independence: When children are given opportunities to do things on their own (that are safe and appropriate, of course), they build self-confidence in their abilities and self-esteem from successfully completing tasks.

Create Incentives: Offer rewards for good behavior rather than punishing the child for poor behavior.

Give them options: Give your child the freedom to choose what they want to do within a certain category. "Would you like to read this book or that book before bed?" "Would you like to put your toys away before you take your bath or after?" etc.

Implementing these positive reinforcement techniques is the most direct and simple way to prevent behavior problems. It can require a bit of creativity, but a reward system can make life much smoother for everyone. Now, I don't believe in excessive rewards. Rewards should be simple and enjoyed, not be the focus of the discipline strategy. For instance, "You can go to your friends' house once your room is clean," as opposed to "you can have ice cream if you stop crying". As the title of this article says, I do believe in teaching self-discipline in our children and here are some tips on how to achieve this through play-based learning.

- Make learning fun! For example, make a game of cleaning their room. This is particularly effective for children who are resistant to tidying up.
- Use other skills that your child has a chance to work on during tasks he/she doesn't enjoy (e.g., while doing chores).
- Another way to provide your child with these opportunities is through structured activities and tasks that teach your child how to be patient and resourceful as they work through challenging activities. For example, they could be given a timed quiz and then awarded for accuracy, time and focus. Challenge them to improve their scores.
- Parent and child therapy. Oftentimes, families need counseling in addition to the above methods of discipline. Sometimes family therapy is a requirement of the juvenile court system. Therapy may be particularly important for parents, who often react to their child's behavior in an attempt to shield the child from additional abuse, neglect, or misfortune.
- Learn some coping skills. Sometimes parents of children with behavior problems find themselves more tense and stressed than parents who are more easygoing. A therapist can provide you with tools to manage stress. Above all, let me underscore, kids need to have the opportunity to hear and see

There's a lot of stuff to unpack from this year's legislative session. There were some good things done, but overall, the 2022 session didn't meet the urgency of the times. As an advocate for changes to New York State cannabis law, I have spent a lot of time this year educating my friends and neighbors on what is actually happening at the state Capitol. We have been pushing for the legislature to take action to address the discrimination that is still happening under the 2010 decriminalization bill, and we had an important victory today.

There is plenty of work left to be done, but this is a major milestone, and we wanted to take a moment to recognize the historic significance of this law change.

"This is a major shift in thinking and policy that New York has not seen in years," says Director of Environmental Justice Josh Klainberg.

We thank the Governor, the NYS Senate and Assembly for their leadership and for listening to us and to our client Victor with his moving personal story who testified at the hearing and who did an excellent job. We look forward to doing the same thing with your case.
